

Pierre Bourdieu and History Influences, inspirations, interactions

International conference | 21-22 April 2022
St Peter's College & Maison Française d'Oxford

Convenors:

Anne Friederike Müller-Delouis (University of Orléans)

Arietta Papaconstantinou (University of Reading)

The French sociologist Pierre Bourdieu died in 2002. His work continues to be highly influential, as evidenced by an ongoing editorial activity and the international dissemination of his writings. While Bourdieu left his mark on many intellectual areas through the breadth of his theories, he established a privileged dialogue with history as a discipline. This conference aims to shed further light, twenty years later, on the links between history, historians, and Bourdieu's scientific legacy.
